During the 19th century, when many Central European countries were still under the control of the Habsburgs in Vienna, art and culture were often the only ways in which the Empire's constituent crownlands could express national identity. Just over a hundred years after the end of Habsburg dominance in Central Europe, this special interest day looks at three case studies, the Czech lands, Slovenia and Hungary, through the prism of their capital cities.

Lecture 1: The Magic of Prague: the City and the Czech Cultural Revolution

Lecture 2: Llubljana and Slovene Singularity

Lecture 3: A Hungarian Metropolis
